What makes a grandparent's house special? The love inside, first of all, but also the aroma of fresh-baked treats, the artifacts of family history, and the really cool toys.

Before your grandkids come for their next stay with you, whether it's for a week, a night, or an afternoon, consider picking up one or more of these inviting, brand-new toys, games, or goodies.

Our editors scoured the booths at the recent Toy Fair in New York City, and tested samples from some of the best game makers in the business to put together this list of what's hot, what's adorable, and, most important, what kids of all ages will love.

You've Got the Whole Zoo in Your Hand

Innovative and addictive multigenerational challenges, the Find It games ($17.99) are self-contained tubes (zoo version pictured above) filled with a mix of recycled plastic pellets and identifiable themed shapes. Players have to twist and turn the tube to find as many of the shapes as they can and check them off on their score sheets. Great for all ages.
